American exports decreased greatly last year, and imports showed a large increase. The reduced exportation is mainly attributed to the corn shortage on account of drought.

It is the general opinion that the loan will violate the terms of the Platt amendment. Senator Elkins and other leaders say the results of that amendment will be to force annexation of the island.

ONLY REMEDY SUGGESTED FOR CUBAN PROBLEM IS ANNEXATION

Republican Members of Congress Believe the Proposed Bond Issue Will Be in Violation of the Platt Amendment, but Do Not Know What to Do About It—Senator Elkins Maintains That the Teller and Platt Amendments Are Inconsistent and Irreconcilable and That the Latter Operates to Bring About the Very Result That the Former Was Designed to Prevent—Annexation of the Island.

ONLY WAY TO AVOID ABANDONING TRADITION OF PROTECTION.

REPUBLICAN SPECIAL.
Washington, Aug. 10.—Republican members of Congress are reluctant to express an opinion in regard to the proposed issue of Cuban bonds. They do not care to commit themselves. It seems, however, to be the general impression that the proposed issue is excessive, especially in view of the official figures regarding the revenues of the island.

In adopting the Platt amendment, Cuba agreed that its Government should not assume or contract any public debt the interest or principal of which, by means of a sinking fund, could not be paid out of the ordinary revenues of the island after deducting the current expenses of the Government. No provision was contained appointing any tribunal or power—legislative, judicial or executive—to which should be referred the question as to whether any debt Cuba proposed to contract would or would not be excessive under the terms of the Platt amendment.

Senator Elkins of West Virginia, who advocated in the Senate at the last session the annexation of Cuba, says:

"The Platt amendment, instead of leaving the government and control of the island to the Cubans, places a limitation upon their power to make treaties, upon their power to contract debts, provides that the United States may intervene to protect life and property on the island, and even claims the right for the United States to jointly look after the sanitation of the island."

"We owe it to the people of Cuba to relieve them from the condition of a dependent nation in which they are already placed by the Platt amendment, and the best way to do this is to invite them to become a State in the Union, which will bring to their people more benefits and advantages than being a small dependent Republic."

ANNEXATION INEVITABLE.

"Wise men and a nation governed by wise men, in entering upon great transactions, should never make unnecessary declarations and pledges. If it had not been for our declaration that the war was not waged for conquest or aggrandizement, known as the Teller amendment, Cuba would to-day be a part of the United States, just as Porto Rico and the Philippines are. This amendment has proved both mischievous and unwise."

"The language of the Teller amendment and the words of the Platt amendment are absolutely inconsistent. I was opposed to both, but was hushed into silence because our great leaders, great lawyers and best thinkers in the Senate thought it best to adopt them."

"Provisions of the act of Congress demanding that Cuba insert the conditions in her constitution, commonly known as the Platt amendment, prevent Cuba from being an entirely free and independent nation. Now is the most opportune time for annexation, before Cuba contracts debts and ruins her credit to start in the race of national life, and before the United States, in order to further help Cuba, makes other sacrifices, such as abandoning her economic tradition and breaking down the policy of protection which has brought such prosperity and success to our people."

"The effect of the Platt amendment, though not intended for that purpose, will operate to bring about annexation. A nation cannot long remain half free and half dependent; such a condition embarrasses healthy progress in national life and leaves but little room for the exercise of the genius and intelligence of a people in the government of their country, especially when under such restrictions as these amendments impose."

PEOPLE LOVED KITCHENER, DESPITE HIS ALMOST CALLOUS INDIFFERENCE TO APPLAUSE.

ENGLISH CROWD WAS VERY DEMOCRATIC

London, Aug. 10.—The newspapers to-day have been rather ridiculous in some of their comments upon the events of yesterday. To read these papers one would imagine that no one had ever looked to be in better health than King Edward.

One exception to the foregoing is found in Reynolds' Weekly Newspaper, which, whatever its standing, has, nevertheless, a tremendous circulation among the masses and at least on this occasion it had a good foundation for its description of the attitude on the crowd of yesterday.

The paper acknowledges that a "mighty greeting was accorded King Edward and Queen Alexandra," but says:

"The one man the populace knew and desired to cheer above them all was Lord Kitchener. He was no gilded peer because he was descended on the left-hand side from the harem of a Seventeenth Century monarch. He sat his horse like a centaur, a grim, stern and never-smiling figure, a man who had accomplished something. History may rate his achievements poorly, but history will have to say he worked. The crowd was not repelled by Lord Kitchener's cold and almost callous indifference."

"I wonder," continues the writer, "what these mighty personages, who, for all the crowd cares, might have been figures in the crowd, thought of the conduct of the multitude. The crowd would have naught to do with your pinhead half-dazed royalty, your Mecklenburg-Stralitzes, your Schleswig-Holsteins, nor even your Dukes of Sparta."

"Crown Princesses of Germany were passed by as though they were Dick, Tom and Harry."

"Even the Prince and Princess of Wales passed by with little more than a murmur of appreciation. Perhaps the most satisfactory feature of the occasion was the general refusal of the democracy to make themselves absurd by overfluous demonstrations."

"Of the thirty or forty royal personages not more than half a dozen aroused what could be called enthusiasm. Queen Alexandra's popularity was proved, but some of the Princesses were seen to be bowing gracefully in response to no salutations whatever."

Under this clause it was declared King Edward's intention to a clause in Queen Victoria's will by virtue of which Osborne House and the immediate estate became "appanages of the sovereignty of England."

It was further alleged that negotiations had been seriously entered into between the King's agents and certain American millionaires for the sale of Osborne House to one of the latter and that these negotiations were broken off by the action of the law counselors of the King, who called his Majesty's attention to a clause in Queen Victoria's will by virtue of which Osborne House and the immediate estate became "appanages of the sovereignty of England."
